TOPIC OF THE WEEK:

Barber Shop & Jail

Hello History Club Members!

Susan the Sleuth here, reporting from Dacotah Prairie Museum, the oldest building on Aberdeen's Main Street! I wish you could visit, but because of a sickness called Covid-19, the museum can't have visitors just yet... The GOOD NEWS is, they have this awesome HISTORY CLUB! We hope you've been enjoying the stories and activities that we've been sharing with you each week. (If you are new to the club and would like to catch up on past topics, check out the museum website to download and print them at home: dacotahprairiemuseum.com)

Remember, in order to be a good investigator of history, you have to be very curious, and it helps to have a good imagination. Are you ready for another week of fun? I am!

Our topic this week is the barber shop and the jail. Thomas is really excited to learn about these two places. (He says he thinks he needs a shave. I say he just likes the smell of shaving cream.)

IMAGINE: Some things are very different when comparing modern times to life years ago in early Brown County, but one thing has not changed. It is something that happens to everyone. Your hair grows! Chances are you've had to get a haircut at some time in your life. Sometimes people have a member of their family cut their hair. Sometimes people go to place in town to pay someone to give them a haircut.

Just like today, if men in the 1880-90s wanted to look nice for church, school, work or just saying hello to that special gal (Thomas says uck!) They may have gone to a barber shop to get a haircut and probably also a shave. Think about it. What things in a barber shop might be the same as today? (A special chair for the customer to sit on, scissors, a razor, etc.) What might be different? These are things we will learn this week!

2020 Is A Year for Making History 2020

HISTORY CAMP: Since its start we've only cancelled camp twice!

It has been a year to remember. From the start of 2020 with snowstorms and blizzards, to everyone's lives changing suddenly with Covid 19 starting in March, people everywhere have had to learn to adapt to new things in 2020, like the pioneers of many years ago.

The pioneers moved to the prairie, a place they had never seen or been before. They found few or no trees, and neighbors were miles apart if you lived in the country. If you lived in the city, constant noise from homes and businesses being built filled the air with new people moving in every day to start a new life. Like us, the pioneers lived in times that were full of change and history in the making.

The Museum started History Camp in 1996 as a way to keep students learning about history during the summer, and as a way to use what many consider an undiscovered treasure, Centennial Village. For one day, campers were able to go into the buildings and participate in old-fashioned activities that the pioneer children would have to do... hauling water, building a fire, going to school, eating homemade ice cream and others.

In the history of the Camp, there was only one year that it wasn't held, 2007....the year of the big flood. Museum staff had to take the summer to clean and care for artifacts from the collection that were damaged by flood water, hundreds of them, so camp could not be held.

This is only the second time in it's history that History Camp can't be held...social distancing being one of the most important reasons why. But, like many other Museums and businesses, the staff of Dacotah Prairie Museum started thinking out-ofthe-box and put together a weekly history club program to serve as a virtual camp. You will still learn about the buildings, the history of our area and play games, just in a different way. Each week for nine weeks there will be a packet with a different theme that hopefully you will enjoy and use to learn some new things about this area. The Museum is also hoping that you and your parents will share photos (or selfies) of your historic discoveries. Send photos to:

What Did a Barber Shop Look Like?

Barber shops could be a place for men to socialize and find out the local happenings of the day as they got a shave or a haircut.

SHOW US WHAT YOU ARE LEARNING! We'd love to hear from you! Are you enjoying history club? Send pictures of your history club adventures to our email address: dacotahprairiemuseum@gmail.com

LET'S GET ACTIVE ... WITH CREATIVITY!

Let's get creative! This week...try playing games or other fun activities with no equipment. No bats, balls, sticks, ropes...nothing of any kind. Imagine you've just moved here and you can't find anything to play with because your belongings haven't been delivered to your new house yet. No dolls, toy trains (don't tell Thomas!), horses, video games...nothing!

Then, your Mother tells you that you have to babysit your 3 little siblings while she's gone for a few hours, what are you going to do? You don't even have a book to read!

There are all kinds of games out there, especially the kind that you have to use your imagination for. Here is a list of quite a few that we know and play with kids, but can you think of any others?

You will need: NOTHING!!

haircut, shave and trim

for not much money. Each barber was responsible for keeping up his tools of the trade and the fancier the Barber Stool, the more money he could charge. In some of the area town's very early history...there was a barber set up before a doctor. So, some early barbers took on two or three jobs....that of a groomer, doctor and dentist. If you look around the Shop at the Village, you will find a small, brown leather chair that would be used to hold the patient's head still... so the barber/dentist might pull out a bad tooth. Remember, no Novocain or other pain killers like we have today, but by that time your tooth hurt so bad, you just wanted it out.

Mr. Gisi loved to tell the story of the barbar pale just outside of the barber pole just outside the door. Back in the middle ages when people started moving from town to town, most couldn't read. But they needed to know what was in each of the different buildings up and down the street. So the owners would always add

The building that houses the Barber Shop was probably built sometime in the 1890's, and was located one mile east of Plana; owned by the Charles Jones family since homestead days. Originally it was used to store seed and lubricants. It was donated to Centennial Village by Dennis Jones in the fall of 1981 and served as village feed and seed store. In the 1990's it was converted to the Village Barbershop by Don Gisi.

WITH TOWEL

The barbershop was a male socializing center of any town's life. In most shops you would get a a drawing or picture of what they sold besides the words. A restaurant might show a plate, knife and fork, or a blacksmith would show an anvil. A place that sold hats might show a drawing of a hat and so on. So, the Barbers took the symbol of the pole, and would paint it different colors for different things. If it was a white background with a blue stripe, that meant they would just do barber jobs... haircutting, shaves and such. But, if it also had red stripes, that meant that they would do doctoring or dentist work...the red standing for the blood that might occur in the job. There used to be over a dozen Barbers in Aberdeen alone, not to mention all of the smaller towns around. But most of them have closed and most men now go to hair salons instead.

The Sheriff's Office and Jail building at Centennial Village contains one of the original jail cells from the Bath area in Dakota Territory. Purchased at public auction and donated to Centennial Village in 1981, the jail contains two beds in a single cell of iron construction. A brand new town needed a place to make sure the people who were not following the law could be held securely, this portable cell worked well until a more permanent building could be built. Every town in Brown county had some kind of jail...starting with Columbia. As time went by and transportation improved, many smaller towns would call on the larger ones to hold their prisoners. So you might be in the small town of Plana and break the law but you would be escorted to Bath or Aberdeen and be held till the judge could see and sentence you there.

Inside our jail at Centennial Village you will find a desk and chair, and above it a place for wanted posters, which are still in use today. Some of these people are wanted for serious offences...

like bank robbery or murder. Others, for things like passing bad checks or deserting their families. Each small building would also need a way of keeping warm, so it would have a stove of some kind in the corner to take the chill off. Modern jails are very different from this example, but hopefully you will never have to find out how!

Family Road Trip Idea: Bath, SD

Bath has always been a small town close to the County Seat, but survived as a farm center even in hard times and drought. The railroad arrived in Bath in 1880 and the town was platted with the first building springing up two months later, a two-story hotel. The "immigrant car" of G.W. Hickman, filled with the family belongings and livestock, was the first car set off the train in Bath, July 1881 and the town had begun.

After the first Bath church services were held at Raymo's Hotel Tent, and with a wagon bridge over the James River completed, town business had begun. A grain elevator (horse powered) was started along with two general stores, a depot, a school, a bakery, and a boarding house. In the five years to follow, Bath grew and its businesses jumped to twenty, now a bustling community.

Bath was the main-line depot for speakers going to and from Tacoma Park. This kind of activity included politicians, social activists, actors, and musicians and made a culturally stimulating environment for early residents. Until wooden sidewalks gave way to cement, sidewalks were inspected daily in Bath for protruding nails and they were pounded in so they would not snag the ladies' dress hems.

Above Photo: Bath church and parsonage. Neither building survives today. The parsonage burned in 1928 and the church building was destroyed by a tornado in 1944.

In June of 1944, a tornado nearly destroyed the whole town. Only two of the twenty houses in town were left undamaged. The town of Bath still survives, with some businesses and several homes. Many of the residents of Bath commute to Aberdeen daily for work, an easy drive thanks to the four-lane highway which links it with Aberdeen.

Bath may seem like an unusual name for a town, but there are many towns in the U.S. named Bath. Use the internet or a U.S. Atlas to find some of them. How many can you find? In which states? (Actually the name Bath can be traced to a city in England.)

Brown County Ghost Town of the Week

"Randolph

Post Office: 1908-1953

The town of Randolph was

"Hmm... Where did it go?"

platted in 1908 when the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad built its line across southern Brown County. The town grew rapidly, serving a large area before highways improved to a point of allowing people to buy goods in other towns.

In its peak years, Randolph had a general store, a hardware store, a school, a church, five elevators, a post office, and a barber shop in its little community. Rail service was excellent, boasting a train in the morning to Aberdeen with one returning in the evening.

The barber, E.C. Giffin, also taught school and was a tailor, making all the uniforms for the baseball team. Randolph, a victim of the economic crash and resulting depression of the 1930s, remains a ghost town of the past.

What is a Ghost Town?

No, it's not a town with ghosts! A ghost town is a town that has had all (or almost all) of the people leave and move away. It may or may not have buildings left.

Investigate: YouTube Video

GO TO: Dacotah Prairie Museum YouTube Channel VIDEO: "History Moment: Rain, Flood, Drought & Hail"

This week we suggest for investigation online: our YouTube video on rain, flood, drought, and hail, which seems very appropriate considering what the weather has been lately for each of us. We've had at least 2 different rain storms in a little over 2 weeks that dumped at least 2 inches of rain on us each time....which leads to flooding, as you will find if you take any kind of car trip. Last Thursday we had hail come down in the storm, but not as big as on the video. No drought around here yet, but the video still shows some really interesting pictures of black blizzards.

We truly live in an area where the weather is changing all the time and you must be aware of it, no matter how young or old you are.
